Description

The nature-loving knife designer from the USA has been fascinated by knives since he was four and has been successfully implementing his own designs since 2013. Flooded with inspiration, in this first joint project with Boker he overturned the laws of nature and brought new life to the world of automatic knives with the slim Gentleman Folder. The clip point blade made of D2 has a discreet satin finish and is opened and unlocked with a push button. The push button and blade axle screw are embedded in the black aluminum handle so that the thumb gets additional grip during use. The solid alluvial soil is cited by the front, mostly smooth grip section, while the fine texturing in the rear grip section picks up the inflowing sediments. The bordered tip-up (r) clip allows a deep carry and underlines the earthy character of the automatic knife.
