Description

Innovation meets industrial charm - Darriel Caston always knows how to design knives with a strong character that are far from the usual conventions and convince all along the line. The compact Boker Plus Ovalmoon Swivel is no exception and can confidently claim to have got the hang of it. Because the knife is opened and closed by turning the two halves of the handle, which are reunited at the end of the handle with the magnetic closure. The sheepfoot blade with chisel grind is made of high-strength D2 and is ideal for the smaller everyday cutting jobs. The two differently colored handle halves are made of aluminum and have a non-slip texture reminiscent of structured sheet metal, which is often used as a floor panel in the industrial sector. The striking recess in the handle reduces the weight and makes the clever folding mechanism easier to use.
