Composition of the yarn in trekking socks: 37% Primaloft polyester, 37% Merino Wool, 15% Polyamide, 6% Polypropylene, 5% Elastane.

PrimaLoft® Performance Fabrics have fast dry times, enhanced breathability, a superior hand-feel and softness.

Merino Wool - natural wool of the highest quality, obtained from Merino sheep. Merino yarn is characterized by exceptional softness, thanks to which it provides a high level of comfort.

Features: Merino wool provides great thermal insulation; on a hot summer it cools the skin and warms it during cold winters. And this is because a lot of air is trapped in the structure of the wool fiber. Regardless of the type of physical activity, wool insulates and regulates temperature. It allows you to keep warm in the cold and cool in the heat, and at the same time removes moisture, leaving the skin dry for longer.

Benefits: Merino wool perfectly separates moisture from the skin - its hygroscopicity is the highest among all fibers. Very popular for the production of socks and outdoor clothing as it is known for its high quality and durability. Thanks to self-cleaning scales located on the surface of the fibers - merino wool significantly reduces the unpleasant smell that arises as a result of sweat deposition. In addition, it maintains an environment hostile to bacteria. Hence, it is also valued in the production of children's clothing. In addition, merino wool is characterized by very high softness and fluffiness, and its fibers are extremely thin and elastic.
